Bharata and the Epics of India: A Miscellany.If all goes according to plan, the Nativa grocery store located at 7274 Kambrook Drive in Coatesville is scheduled to open March 5. This marks the first retail store for the Mexican-based grocery, but to be more specific it is the first store that owner Daniel Linares will open. Previously he owned a Mexican restaurant in East Stroudsburg called Lenny’s. Currently there is just one other retail store in Lehigh County that carries the Nativa brand, although Nativa has outlets in eastern Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware. The store carries products that are hard to find in Lehigh County. There are meat stores here, but the bulk of meats are shipped in from out of state. The owner explained that he does not like to drive to Philadelphia to purchase supplies, so he decided to start a company that sells some of these products. Nativa is a true family-owned business, and Linares was born in Mexico. He moved to the United States at age 18 and spent most of his young life in the area. He earned a bachelor’s degree in civil engineering and a master’s degree in construction. He was working at a construction site in the Lehigh Valley when he became interested in the Mexican food available here and began learning to cook that food. He began doing this in his spare time, and eventually decided he wanted to run his own restaurant. In 2005 he purchased Lenny’s on Easton Road, and opened that restaurant. Two years later, he closed the restaurant and decided to move back to Mexico. He didn’t plan to stay there, but his wife expected him to earn a better living there. While he was living there he learned that his son was born and now he and his family live in the U.S. again. Linares said the Nativa grocery store is one of the best things he has accomplished in his life.

English essayist.Q: Which character is this on hsearch_r's string array? In the hsearch manual it says: wchar_t *str[] If a string array is specified, or if the string_array flag is set, a pointer to a string list is returned. Each character in the string list is assigned to the corresponding position in the string list. But when I ran char *os[3]; strcpy(os,"\x00\x00\x01"); // Should be '\x00\x00\x01', but it is '\x00\x00\x01\x00\x00\x00\x01' printf("%s ",os); the output is this: \x00\x00\x01\x00\x00\x00\x01 I also tried this: printf("%s ",os+3); and the output is still \x00\x00\x01\x00\x00\x00\x01 Why is that? Why is \x00\x00\x01 not being printed when it should be? Or is it the characters in the string array that are being printed incorrectly? A: \x00\x00\x01 (0x00e0 0x00 0x00) is not a valid character in UTF-8. It happens that the decoder in the default C library recognizes it as a character representing a NULL byte: the Unicode NULL code point U+0000. You can use the more portable \x00\x0e\x00\x00\x01. Q: How to only allow digits, letters and decimals in a php form submit I have a simple form which I want to restrict to numbers, letters and decimal numbers. I think this should be done with the Regex validation, but I can't make it
